Sales Tax Requirements

Companies selling over the Internet are subject to the same sales tax collection requirements as any other retailers. Remote sellers (including Internet retailers and catalog companies) are generally required to collect taxes where they have a physical selling presence. If they do not have any such presence, they are not required to collect sales taxes.

Order ship to addresses in California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, or Hawaii are subject to state sales tax.

The Internet Tax Freedom Act (ITFA) has been renewed through October 31, 2007. Please note, the ITFA was primarily intended to prevent state and local governments from imposing new or discriminatory taxes on Internet transactions and on Internet access. Despite the name of the Act, ITFA does not preclude state and local governments from imposing existing sales tax collection requirements on companies selling over the Internet, that have offices in these state.

Information for Tax-Exempt Customers

If your organization has tax-exempt, 501(c), status, you will need to provide us with acceptable proof of exempt status for the state where the items will be shipped. A copy of a currently valid IRS tax-exemption certificate is acceptable proof. Fax your proof of exempt status to: 303-444-4304.

Place your order through the datalogger web site. After your order is submitted and we have received your proof of exemption, we will delete the sales tax from your order. If your order is processed before we receive your proof of exemption, we will refund the sales tax to you once we receive your proof of exemption. Please fax us the following information:

Your order number

Your e-mail address

Your organization's tax-exemption certificate or other acceptable proof of exempt status.

Mark your fax "Attn: Sales@datalogger.com Tax Exempt" and fax to 303-444-4304.

While you need to submit this information to us once, you do need to contact us after placing each order to ensure you are not assessed– or refunded – the tax on your purchase.
